

HEALTHY CHICAGO SEED GRANT 2021

Project Overview

The Chicago Department of Public Health (CDPH), guided by its principles of deconstructing racist systems, preventing trauma through trauma-informed practices, cultural responsiveness, and health equity has subcontracted The Network Advocating Against Domestic Violence to manage awards of Healthy Chicago Seed Grants.

The goal is to build internal capacity and to work on racially equitable strategies designed to improve overall public health of the city by addressing racism as a root cause of underlying health conditions. These Seed Grants will build upon the information and strategies that CDPH and our partners collected through our 2016 Healthy Chicago 2.0 and Healthy Chicago 2025 community health assessments and community health improvement plans. The Network will further establish and support a diverse learning cohort of the Seed Grantees, building community capacity to promote policy and systems-level initiatives that follow the Healthy Chicago 2025 guiding principles and change approach.

As part of CDPH's commitment to racial and health equity, The Network will award Healthy Chicago Seed Grants to ten neighborhood agencies. Each agency will receive a grant of up to $20,000 to use for internal capacity building strategies and to cover the cost of having two staff members/volunteers participate in the learning cohort. The Network will provide technical assistance to enhance the internal capacity of nonprofit agencies (the "Seed Grantees").

Capacity building is increasing effectiveness and future sustainability of a nonprofit and can include the following:

- Building Civic Engagement & Political Power – strengthening and/or building neighborhood 501c3 and 501c4 (as defined by the Internal Revenue Service rules)
- Communications Narrative & Social Power – learning to create and amplify community “narratives” that strengthen media and strategic communications
- Community Organizing & People Power – increasing power sharing and networking between current and new community organizing groups and networks.
- Economic Development & Economic Power – strengthen and connect community leaders and organizations to expand businesses and increase their access to credit and operating capital.
- Leadership Development & Strategic Convening's – expanding the leadership pipeline of social change leaders across a wide spectrum of issues and sectors through skills building.
- Policy Advocacy & System Reform – capacity building to support legislative advocacy to influence, develop and disseminate policy and model legislation, assess impact on the community, and support multi-issue/multi-sector approaches to address the complexity of structural and institutional racism's impact on overall public health.
- Research & Intellectual Power – build stronger connections to researchers with expertise in community-partnership research strategies within communities, research organizations, and think tanks.

The Network and CDPH will finalize topics in conjunction with Seed Grantees as the learning cohort participants identify areas most important to their agencies’ development. The cohort will also be part of a community co-development and implementation plan for the strategies of Healthy Chicago 2025.

For more information about HC 2.0 and 2025, visit

Applicants should be leaders in exhibiting CDPH’s guiding principles in their own organization’s people and practices, demonstrate commitment to health and racial equity. Seed Grants are for neighborhood agencies with physical offices within the following historically disinvested community areas:

Table 1: Qualifying Community Areas

Archer Heights	East Garfield Park	North Lawndale
Armour Square	East Side	Riverdale
Auburn-Gresham	Fuller Park	South Deering
Austin	Gage Park	South Lawndale
Belmont Cragin	Hermosa	South Shore
Brighton Park	Humboldt Park	West Elsdon
Chicago Lawn	New City	West Garfield Park
		West Lawn

Requirements

- Be a not-for-profit organization with a 501(c)3 status
- Have an office physically located in the City of Chicago qualifying community areas (See Table 1 above) from which the agency offers programming or services
- Have an operating budget not to exceed $500,000, not including in-kind expense
- Have completed a 990-tax return or audit for the previous fiscal year

Co-development strategies will ensure that public partnerships with community organizations move along the spectrum of community engagement from simply keeping residents informed toward collaboration and empowerment.
